

TRAILER

design Rane Vaskivuori

Trailer is a movable side table for lobbies, offices and meeting rooms. It can be used as a stand for a laptop computer, a surface on which to take notes, and a bedside table.

Trailer has a minimalist look to it. The table's defined structure accentuates the softness of upholstered and thanks to its design, it goes well with various other pieces of furniture. The positioning of the base enables the table top to be pulled over a seat.

Of the standard colours available for Trailer, white is suitable for most environments, although yellow would provide a vibrant splash of colour and freshen the appearance of a seating group.

Rane Vaskivuori

Rane Vaskivuori was born in 1967. He studied architecture at the Aalto University School of Science and Technology and works as a designer. Vaskivuori's most well-known works include the Globlow lamp (together with Vesa Hinkola and Markus Nevalainen), which was selected for the permanent collections of the Museum of Modern Art (MoMA) in New York, and the Y umbrella stand and coat rack.

Vaskivuori considers the Good Design Award he received from the Chicago Athenaeum in 1998 to be one of the crowning moments of his career.

Vaskivuori is a founding member of and partner in Valvomo Architects.
