

HUSH – DESIGN PEKKA TOIVOLA NOW AVAILABLE

The Hush Phone Booth is a private-feeling space that gives you privacy for phone calls even in open offices and other public spaces. The interior of the Hush booth is spacious and cosy. It has a small desk for your laptop or other devices and the booth can also be electrified. Thanks to the optimized dimensions that allow for flexible placement and repositioning it can be easily placed along corridors and in non-working spaces, or back-to-back in pairs, to make almost any location usable and private.

Stepping inside, the lighting and ventilation system are automatically activated by a motion sensor, while the door closes softly and securely on a noiseless gas spring. The interior is lined with sound-damping material, which prevents echoes and adds to the comfort of the space - it is so pleasant to be in. But perhaps more important than the cozy quietness of the interior is the great feeling of safety and privacy that the users experience. This is because those inside are not so visible from the outside.

PEKKA TOIVOLA

Pekka Toivola, born in 1955, has graduated as an Industrial designer from the Helsinki University of Art and Design in 1980 and thereafter has received several awards and acknowledgements within the field. Currently he is working as Martela's Head designer. Many products within the Martela catalogue originated from his pen, such as the Big cabinets, the Exceed table, the Face screen and the Pinta conference table.
